

AKE- History

“It was the morning of July 25, 1970, when our Study Group was born. We discovered afterwards that at that moment, the constellation Virgo, with its star Spica, was rising just above the horizon. Near this was Jupiter. We felt that this constellation was a good symbol for our work. In mythology, the constellation Virgo bestows the blessing of growth. It has been told of the Greek goddess Demeter that she searched for her daughter Persephone, who had been kidnapped by Hades, with the star Spica used as a torch. In Egyptian astrology, Spica is the star that marks the ear of wheat.”

These lines were written by the founder Dr. Udo Renzenbrink (1913-1994) on the 10th anniversary of the AKE.

The ear of grain is the symbol and logo of the AKE; it shows our relationship to our staple food: grain. The different grains have accompanied the AKE from the beginning. They have been a topic for research and have recaptured their rightful place in the kitchen.

July 25, 1970 Study Group for Nutritional Research (Arbeitskreis für Ernährungsforschung: AKE) is established.

1970-77 In the first 7 years, the AKE was set up in a small apartment in Bad Liebenzell-Unterlengenhardt in Nordschwarzwald (northern black forest). Udo Renzenbrink held lectures and conducted several research projects. The discoveries were implemented by preparing a lunch in the small kitchen in the apartment. Margret Koos cooked the first new grain dishes, later Barbara Hübner. Recipes for millet, barley, rye and other grains were developed.

1977 The “Haus der Ernährung” (House of Nutrition) was opened.
